

Eco-Lux: Art in Light of Ecology 1953-2006
July 22 – August 26, 2006
Opening Reception Saturday, July 22 6-8pm

With the recent resurgence of environmental issues in popular culture, LightBox presents Eco-Lux: Art in the Light of Ecology. This is the first in a series of annual surveys highlighting how ecological awareness has affected the practice and content of contemporary art. Artists included in Eco-Lux are Maya Lin, Samuel Yates, Kelly Poe, Rebecca Morales, Sharon Ryan, Yayoi Kusama, Brian Bress, Tia Pulitzer, Samantha Fields and Joel Tauber. The artists will be in attendance for the opening.

LightBox is pleased to be working in charitable partnership with StopGlobalWarming.org. 10% of gallery sales from Eco-Lux will benefit StopGlobalWarming.org, a response by citizens to address the most urgent issue of our generation: reducing global warming, and with it, protecting our planet and the survival of its species as we know it.

Through the power of a grassroots “virtual march” – an online movement hundreds of thousands of Americans, from Senator John McCain to Walter Cronkite, from the Union of Concerned Scientists to The National Council of Churches – have joined to voice their concern about global warming and to urge our leaders to take action. This action starts with the click of a mouse.

With the support of leading scientists, political, religious, cultural, and business leaders, as well as everyday citizens, the March is moving across the country via the internet showing evidence of the alarming effects of global warming and offering solutions along the way. With a click of the mouse, Americans are using the Virtual March as a means to send a loud and clear message to our government that we want solutions now. By presenting Eco-Lux, LightBox is seeking to raise awareness within the arts community.

For more information please contact Kim Light or Christine Nichols.
Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday 11a-6p.